Hunger awareness and the value of food banks are near and dear to my heart. I served for over seven years as an active Board Member with the Food Depot Alimentaire. During my tenure I spearheaded several fundraising campaigns, most importantly, Hunger Awareness Week.

Hunger has no boundaries and affects thousands of New Brunswickers who do not have enough money to feed themselves or their families. Some of these people could be your neighbors, friends, family members or even the working class who have difficulties making ends meet. With the current pandemic situation, food bank decencies rose over 20% across Canada and we feel the effects right here in our region.

“On average, Moncton’s two community kitchens serve 740 meals to men, women and children each day.

The Food Depot Alimentaire supplied food banks and soup kitchens with more than 2.5 million pounds of food.

Served more than 1,100,000 meals, 30,000 of which were served to families. Out of these 30,000 families, a little more than 40,000 adults and 18,000 children under the age of 18 were fed.”*

Our special guest is Julie Hopkins from the Albert County Food Bank. She will take us on a virtual tour of the facility and talk about the growing issue of hunger and the need for food.

Donations welcome to the Albert County Food Bank
